Change In Sentiment

"There are two or three newspapers in the state who are advancing backwards" the cause of good roads through their virulent attacks upon the governor for his veto of the three highway appropriation bills. It is all very true that the governor did sign the appropriation bill appropriating money that will be spent in California and that he did veto the bills providing for highways. It is also true that the Tribune had hoped the governor might see his way clear to approve the road bills he vetoed. But he did not, and he gave his reasons, and his reasons are strong enough to command respect.

"It is also noticeable that the attacks are coming mainly from sources that are known to be politically hostile to the governor and the suspicion is gaining ground that these critics are more interested in discrediting the governor than they are in promoting good roads.

"We will again suggest that as to the exposition appropriations the amounts were fixed by the legislature, before the bills went to the governor for his signature. It was that or nothing. No doubt the governor like most people in Nevada, believed the state should be represented. And the legislature also provided a way to raise this exposition money while it did not provide a way in the other case. It very often happens that legislatures appropriate the same money to be expended upon different objects, but when the executive department comes to disburse it they cannot pay the same dollar twice. A little intelligent "bookkeeping" calculation near the close of a legislative session is always a wholesome legislative exercise."

It is not at all surprising that the governor has an ardent supporter in the person of the Goldfield Tribune from which the above article is taken. Yet, the governor has made no explanation for his sudden change in sentiment. Two years ago, during the gubernatorial campaign, the governor was an ardent advocate of good roads. He freely made the promise that if elected he would do everything in his power to promote the industry of this state. This exclamation was made not only in Tonopah, but in practically every county in the state, and the voters were led to believe that the promises would be kept. Like other promises made by the same governor, the executive failed to keep his word and conditions have reached such a point that it is not at all surprising that he has broken faith.

The Reno Gazette once took occasion to refer to the governor as "White faced and faltering." Such a sentiment appears to be correct when it comes to official action being taken toward remedying conditions for the better. Nevada is in need of good roads and the governor was perfectly cognizant of this fact. It is known that he intended to assist in building good roads, but it is not known what pressure was used to effect a sudden change in sentiment.

Reviving Idle Properties

In every mining district throughout the west may be found properties, sometimes only one, again, a number that are lying idle, says the Mining Record. Some of these properties may have been closed down for only a short time, others may have been idle for many years.

There are various causes for the lack of life at such properties, aside from that of being worked out. Differences between those in control, disagreements, with no one willing to give in allow the other party to take hold and run things; lack of funds; a change in the character or a lessening of the value of the ore; any one of these things may operate to cause a shut-down.

But whatever the cause there is often to be found in such properties the opportunity for some one with the ability to take hold and bring the property once more into the producing columns.

It may be that in the early days the mine was productive of rich ore, which paid a profit even with a long haul to market. When this rich ore gave out, the owners found it no longer profitable to operate and closed down until conditions changed. Many such properties, for example, may be found in Nevada.

Then perhaps after years have passed, comes the railroad. Or possibly a method of handling the ore with a closer saving of values, at a lower cost of operation, is devised. When such a thing has come, the original owners may long have been dead, or no longer desire to take active charge. Then it is that new capital comes in, and once more there is a producing mine sending forth its wealth, returning profits to those interested.

Instances, too, have been known where those in control of a mine have allowed their personal differences to become magnified to such a degree that they are willing to close down the property rather than see the "other fellow" win his point. In the course of time such properties usually pass into the hands of some one who is willing to attend strictly to business—and once again the property is put on a paying basis.

When, however, it is a lack of money that causes a shut-down, then it is time for quick work on the part of those concerned. New blood, with new ideas and the needed money, has often worked wonders in such cases. And, too, an awakened interest on the part of those owning the property, or holding stock in the owning corporation, has more than once brought the touch of life that wrought the difference between success and failure.

Whatever the cause may be, the fact that a property is lying idle is not of necessity a sign that it is worthless.

Rather, indeed, it is more likely that there is then presented an opportunity for the right man to take hold and bring a profit paying mine out of what is seemingly a failure.

The militant suffragettes of England are entitled to as much sympathy in their crusade of arson, window smashing and train wrecking, as are the Turks who have committed murder, rapine and other outrages. There is no distinction or difference between the two bodies. One is striving to secure the right to vote and the other to exterminate hereditary enemies. The tactics of both are contrary to even civilized warfare, yet the civilized nation sits idly by and witnesses each new happening with but little comment.

Lung Trouble Yielded To This Remedy

Anyone interested in the treatment of throat and lung troubles should get one of the booklets telling of the recovery by the use of Eckman's Alternative. Congestive, stubborn colds and pneumonia may be the beginning of more serious troubles. Eckman's Alternative is an effective remedy. Read Mr. Kanaly's statement:

"For five or six years I was troubled with cough and expectoration. I also had a high fever. My case was declared consumption by my physician. I was given cod liver oil, creosote and other medicines, all without result. At Christmas time, 1906, I was not expected to live. Calling Dr. R. H. McCarthy, he advised the use of Eckman's Alternative, which was entirely successful. I have gained in weight, I go out in all weathers and have had no cough or cold whatever. I give these facts to encourage others to use Eckman's Alternative."

(ATTEST) JAS. W. KANALY, (Above abbreviated, more on request.) Eckman's Alternative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe throat and lung affection, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, stubborn colds and in rebuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons, or habit-forming drugs. For sale by leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.
